Closed 5.24 mi Hours Claims This Business Is This Your Business? Now claims to immediately update your business information and menu! We love this place. Being from a house of a German mother. I grew up with good German food and bread. Years ago in San Diego, you had to go to the sausage king downtown, unfortunately it burned down a long time ago. But we found... Tip Top. They have groceries from all over Europe, great beers and wines, a full butcher shop with lunch meat and sausages made on site and a fantastic restaurant inside with BIG JOHNS BREAKFAST 3 eggs any style, home fried potatoes, toast, and two types of meat (ham, sausage, bratwurst, knockwurst, bacon) and btw meat is BOTTOMLESS!!! yep when you're done eating the meat on your plate, take the receipt up to the register and order 2 until you're drunk or tossed (hopefully not, lol). There is also an on-site bakery. Great siteMore Live whelk, also known as sea snails Carlsbad mainstay Tip Top Meats has been around more than half a century and is still an incredible deal whether you are there for the butcher, market or the authentic German restaurant. I stop at all the other time I pass that road looking for bratwurst weisswurst, and the best of what else wurst I can find. 6118 Paseo del Norte, Carlsbad Somehow, Tip Top's nearly 90-year-old owner, a Cold War escapee of East Berlin, known as Big John, had the initiative to open another market next door. Top Choice Fish opened a year ago and I've been looking in as I walked by with my freshly wooded sausage. I saw the fish counter, noted the popular fish and chips on the menu, and thought that's what the small space had to offer. The Showcase Fish Platter: local halibut plus two sides Maybe I was blasé because San Diego is blessed when it comes to fish market restaurants. Blue Water and Point Loma Seafoods have become nationally known in San Diego right, El Pescador has done so in La Jolla nearly 40 years, and another highway exit south of Carlsbad, Pelly's Fish Market and Café just celebrated its 30th anniversary with a redevelopment. We've covered fish markets, I thought. But where else can I get smoked cheddar brat? Lobster and crab in a Top Choice Fish live tank Finally I heard the siren singing of fish and looked a little closer. Showcase Fish Platter looked like a good deal. Pay the market price for your range of sautéed, poached, or grilled fish from the counter, and add $5 to add two sides: everything from french fries to coleslaw. I chose an almond-slivered rice pilaf, and black beans. Yellowtail and stonefish on ice More importantly, I got a nice little piece of sautéed halibut. Make it sautéed local halibut: $21 per pound, so my 6.4 grams cost $8.40, for a $13.40 total. Fish selection varied: I noted the entire yellowtail and rock fish on ice, with cleaned filets of Alaskan halibut and Icelandic cod inside the counter. When I asked about local trapping, I was pointed to swordfish, wahoo and Mahi. And the halibut, like Top Choice grilled crispy for an impeccable lunch plate. Shrimp spends his last days in a fish market live tank But more than enjoying my meal, I was taken off the many seafood options packed into the small space. In another fish counter it was ready to make crab cakes, ceviches, and like ten different types of smoked fish. It was a cooler dedicated to caviar, and a tightly packed freezer offering the likes of frozen fish, crayfish tails and alligator sausage. But the funniest thing is the living fish tanks. Inside their gently rippling waters, live shrimp, crabs and lobsters await their fate. Choose your favorite from the tank, and Top Choice will send you home with a live try to cook at home. It's not getting healthier. A small fish market with lots of options I might know what to do with crab or lobster. But I have no idea what to do with the pipe. What is whelk? I had to ask. Sea snails. Whelk are sea snails. Where else can you find sea snails? I'm not sure I've ever seen them on a restaurant menu (I may have but intentionally ignored them). It may have taken decades for Top Choice Fish to join Tip Top Meats in providing fresh protein options to larger Carlsbad, but it gives all the feeling of affordability mixed with foodie wonders that hold us back. Kudos to Big John for beating gold once, after all these years! Page 2 Jared Sclar worked for the Association of Cannabis Professionals and Congressman Mike Levin. A raft of political professionals have found a sanctuary in San Diego City Hall from the storm of unemployment after the campaign, as evidenced by recent online revelations posted by the city's office. This year, Democratic campaign veterans are flooding into city council and mayoral offices with the right-to-left control shift given by voters in November. Lauren Cazares worked for the fundraising company Ground Link. As with the GOP before, the new hires are expected to build a new political base to fend off challenges to the new order, guard access and protect their newly elected bosses' agendas. But - also like the late Republicans - some new mayoral staff have intriguing links to the GOP-leaning San Diego Regional Chamber of Commerce, which campaigned for Mayor Todd Gloria's bid for mayor over his fellow Democrat, former City Councilwoman Barbara Bry. Lauren Cazares, deputy chief of staff to Gloria, was paid between $10,000 and $100,000 last year as account manager for Ground Link, Inc., a San Diego-based campaign fundraising firm, according to her statement of financial interests, filed March 7. Another newly minted Gloria staffer, community representative Kohta Zaiser, lists Ground Link on his LinkedIn profile as a former employer before becoming Gloria's mayoral campaign deputy field director. Kohta Zaiser, lists Ground Link as a former employer. City campaign submissions show that Ground Link was paid of San Diegans for Midway Revitalization, the Canadian developer-funded campaign committee supported Republican Mayor Kevin Faulconer's successful bid to remove the height limit in the Sports Arena district via the November vote. In addition, Ground Link received $21,750 from the San Diego Regional Chamber of Commerce Political Action Committee, and $1,500 from Republican Noli Zosa's failed city council campaign. Once political director of the Chamber of Commerce, Sara Kamiab is listed as rector of Ground Link. Incorporated by one-time political director of the Chamber of Commerce Sara Kamiab in June 2016, Ground Link listed income tax preparer Richard David York as president and Kamiab as principal in disclosures filed in 2016 and 2019 with California's secretary of state. While in the chamber, Kamiab led an education program for business leaders interested in public service and monitored PAC recommendations and spending, according to the organization's website. Gloria's chief of staff Paola Avila was fined $200 by the city's ethics commission in August 2009 for failing to disclose her paid lobbying - filed a January 7 report showing she received more than $100,000 in salary from the chamber last year. Jared Sclar, incoming deputy chief of staff to the council Democrat Raul Campillo, also comes from the political realm, where he earned more than $100,000 from his campaign consulting firm Jared Sclar & Associates, according to a 6th U.S. District Attorney's Report on The New York Era. Per his LinkedIn profile, among Sclar's previous concerts was a year-long stint in 2018 as communications director for the Association of Cannabis Professionals, and time as field director for Democratic Congressman Mike Levin. Randy Wilde, a political adviser to the new mayor, received between $1,000 and $10,000 from the Gloria for Mayor campaign last year, according to his January 5 filing. Wilde also spent time as a district representative for Gloria's assembly office. In addition, Gloria staffer Cazares reported earning between $1,000 and $10,000 as campaign coordinator for Democrat Colin Parents La Mesa's bid for the successful re-election bid. A fixture in Carlsbad since 1967, Tip Top Meats is a valued institution that combines a European market with an old world-style delicacy and restaurant, plus a full-service butcher department with its own smoking area. Tipsters have told us about a component that will bring surf to Tip Top meat-centric peat offerings. Top Choice Fish - Market and Eatery, a new seafood concept from the Tip Top team, takes its place in an adjacent production market. Soft opening in early 2017, Top Choice will work directly will local fish, buy whole fish and live seafood and process the catch internally for a retail marketplace that opens at 10 .m.; fresh seafood will be delivered seven days a week. At the sit-down eatery, diners will be able to take their selection of fish to be cooked on site, or choose from a menu ranging from homemade soups to seafood platters and fish and chips. The restaurant is open daily for lunch and dinner and also serves wine and beer. 6118 Paseo Del Norte, Carlsbad, CA 92011, United States
